In a time when words like amazing and masterful are flippantly thrown around to describe every record that is released, Wyatt Easterling's new album, From Where I Stand, rises above the fray and establishes the bar for releases this year.

From Where I Stand was started in 2019 and finished throughout the pandemic. While the quality of the album was certainly aided by the extra time and work allowed by the shutting down of the world, this is not just another "Covid album". Easterling says of the experience:

"The unexpected arrival of Covid 19 struck the world dumb as we knew it and stopped us all in our tracks. If it weren't for all the suffering and loss of life, I would consider this time a God send that enabled me to experiment with different approaches for these songs."

The result is an album that is as lush and full sonically as it is lyrically. Collaborating with co-writer and executive producer, Thomas Anderson Bookwalter, engineer Chris Rosser and a plethora of studio musicians allowed Easterling to bring all 10 tracks to their peak. Starting with the title track and first single, Wyatt lets the listener know that he will be bringing them along on an emotional and glaringly human experience. Easterling's long lauded songwriting chops are on full display, touching on love, loss, moving on, freedom of speech and doing so with an honesty that every listener will latch onto.

Wyatt Easterling has a long history in all aspects of the music industry, songwriting, publishing, producing, as well as A&R for Atlantic Records. His work has helped launch the careers of folks such as Paul Thorn, Keith Urban, and John Michael Montgomery. His successful writing workshop in France, The Castle, brought in artists such as Cher, Bon Jovi, Peter Dinklage and more. In short, Easterling knows how to write a great song.

"Wyatt's New Project From Where I Stand is a fine example of his world class singing and songwriting chops. He plays these songs with a lot of heart and soul. It's a great album, so check it out"

- Paul Thorn

"These songs, simply and skillfully executed, reflect an unapologetic and skillful statement of who Wyatt is - as if to say, I've been through some stuff and I've come out on the other side with peace, and it's possible."

- Louisa Branscomb

"Another collection of thoughtfully crafted, honest songs from the heart of Wyatt Easterling"

- Robby Hecht
